

Peer Reviewed

Title:

Contributors 19:1

Journal Issue:

Places, 19\(1\)

Publication Date:

2007

Publication Info:

Places

Permalink:

<http://escholarship.org/uc/item/5h60p9b7>

Acknowledgements:

This article was originally produced in Places Journal. To subscribe, visit www.places-journal.org. For reprint information, contact places@berkeley.edu.

Keywords:

places, placemaking, architecture, environment, landscape, urban design, public realm, planning, design, contributors

Copyright Information:

All rights reserved unless otherwise indicated. Contact the author or original publisher for any necessary permissions. eScholarship is not the copyright owner for deposited works. Learn more at http://www.escholarship.org/help_copyright.html#reuse

eScholarship
University of California

eScholarship provides open access, scholarly publishing services to the University of California and delivers a dynamic research platform to scholars worldwide.

Contributors

Douglas C. Allen, ASLA, is a Professor and Associate Dean at the College of Architecture, Georgia Institute of Technology.

Yael Allweil is an Editorial Assistant at Places, an architect, and a Ph.D. Candidate in the University of California, Berkeley. Her work includes professional, curatorial and critical engagement with architecture and the built environment through academic and nonacademic writing.

François Ascher is a sociologist who teaches at the Institut Français d'Urbanisme at the University of Paris, VIII. His recent books include Les nouveaux principes de l'urbanisme: La fin des villes n'est pas à l'ordre du jour (2001); Modernité: la nouvelle carte du temps (2003); Les sens du mouvement: Modernité et mobilité (2005); and Le mangeur hypermoderne: Une figure de l'individu électrique (2005).

Peter Bosselmann is a Contributing Editor of Places and a Professor of Urban Design with appointments in City and Regional Planning, Architecture, and Landscape Architecture and Environmental Planning at the University of California, Berkeley. As chairman of the LAEP Department in 2005, he co-directed the conference on the Future Metropolitan Landscape. His urban design practice includes plans and simulation studies for San Francisco, Oakland, New York, Toronto, Tokyo and Milan.

Rachel Breen is the culture and art program associate at Tomales Bay Institute. She is also a working artist and an adjunct professor of art who is trying to bring her passion for art and belief in the arts' ability to foster social change together with innovative ideas about the commons.

Irene Curulli's professional practice includes landscape architectural and architectural designs, alone and in collaboration with Gigantes Zenghelis Architects, De Architekten Cie, and Oma. She teaches at the Technical University of Eindhoven and is Principal at Terraforma, a landscape architecture firm based in Amsterdam.

Robert Fishman is a Professor at the University of Michigan, where he teaches in the urban design, architecture, and urban planning programs. His books on the history of cities and urbanism include Bourgeois Utopias: The Rise and Fall of Suburbia (1987); and Urban Utopias in the Twentieth Century: Ebenezer Howard, Frank Lloyd Wright, and Le Corbusier (1977).

Hugh Hardy is Principal of H3 Hardy Collaboration Architecture LLC in New York City.

Randolph T. Hester is a Consulting Editor of Places and Professor of Landscape Architecture at the University of California, Berkeley. He is a founder of the research movement to apply sociology to the design of neighborhoods, cities and landscapes, and is a partner in Community by Design. His most recent book is Design for Ecological Democracy (2006).

Michael Hough is a landscape architect and founding partner of the Toronto firm Envision the Hough Group. He was a professor, now retired, in the Faculty of Environmental Studies, York University, Canada. He is the author of Cities and Natural Process: A Basis for Sustainability (2004) and Out of Place: Restoring Identity to the Regional Landscape (1990).

Hidenobu Jinnai has been a Professor of Planning at Hosei University, Tokyo, Japan, since 1990. His books in Japanese include Ethnic Tokyo (1987); Veneto-Italian Life Style Scenario (1993); and Italian Acquascape (1993); and in English, Tokyo: A Spatial Anthropology (1995).

Elizabeth Macdonald is a Principal of Cityworks, an urban design firm in San Francisco that focuses on street design. She is also Assistant Professor in the Department of City and Regional Planning at the University of California, Berkeley. She is co-author of The Boulevard Book: History, Evolution, Design of Multiway Boulevards (2002), and the Urban Design Reader (2006).

Margaret O'Mara is Deputy Director of the Bill Lane Center for the Study of the North American West and Acting Assistant Professor of History at Stanford University. She has studied metropolitan growth and industrial suburbanization, universities and urban economic development, and politics and governance in the twentieth century North American West. She is the author of Cities of Knowledge: Cold War Science and the Search for the Next Silicon Valley (2004).

Stephanie Pincetl is a Researcher at the Institute of the Environment at UCLA and a Social Scientist at the U.S. Forest Service's Pacific Southwest Research Station. She has studied questions of urbanization, equity and environment, and land use and governance in the United States and France, and is author of Transforming California: A Political History of Land Use and Development (1999).

Deni Ruggeri is a Ph.D. Candidate in the Department of Landscape Architecture and Environmental Planning at the University of California, Berkeley. His practice includes work in urban design, landscape architecture, and community participation.

Yoji Sasaki is a landscape architect and a Managing Principal of Ohtori Consultants Environmental Design Institute. In addition to maintaining his practice, he is a Professor at Kyoto University of Arts and Design and a lecturer at Kobe University and Hiroshima Institute of Technology.

Bernardo Secchi is a Professor of Urbanism at Venice School of Architecture. Since 1960 he has been involved in developing many regional and city plans in Italy and Europe. His books include Il racconto urbanistico (1984); Un progetto per l'urbanistica (1989); Tre piani (1995); and La prima lezione di urbanistica (2001).

Thomas Sieverts is a Professor Emeritus of Town Planning at Darmstadt Institute of Technology, Germany. He served as Scientific Director of the International Building Exhibition, Emscher Park, in Germany's Ruhr District. He developed the concept for the "Westpark" in Bochum, together with his partners from SKAT-Architekten, the firm responsible for its master plan and detailed designs for various of its elements.

Robert Sommer is an environmental psychologist and retired professor at the University of California, Davis. He and Barbara Sommer have documented driftwood art along the Pacific Coast for several decades.

Brent Toderian was appointed the City of Vancouver, British Columbia, Director of Planning in 2006, and was previously the Manager of Centre City Planning and Design for the City of Calgary, Alberta. He is a founding member of the Council for Canadian Urbanism.

Laura Wolf-Powers chairs the Graduate Center for Planning and the Environment in the Architecture School at Pratt Institute. She writes on urban redevelopment and community development with a focus on labor market issues.